Judith Pamela Butler (born February 24, 1956) is an American philosopher and gender studies scholar whose work has influenced political philosophy, ethics, and the fields of third-wave feminism, queer theory, and literary theory. In 1993, Butler began teaching at the University of California, Berkeley, where they have served, beginning in 1998, as the Maxine Elliot Professor in the Department of Comparative Literature and the Program of Critical Theory. They are also the Hannah Arendt Chair at the European Graduate School (EGS). Butler is best known for their books Gender Trouble: Feminism and the Subversion of Identity (1990) and Bodies That Matter: On the Discursive Limits of Sex (1993), in which they challenge conventional, heteronormative notions of gender and develop their theory of gender performativity. This theory has had a major influence on feminist and queer scholarship. Their work is often studied and debated in film studies courses emphasizing gender studies and performativity.

*Moontype Moontype is a type foundry based in Hamburg and Stockholm, run by Pia Schröer and Julia Flomm – two friends who teamed up to create unique, contemporary fonts. Their work focuses on researching gender-equitable approaches in type design and integrating these insights into their future typefaces.

*Stellar The serif font arose from the desire to respond to the change in language through design and to promote the use of gender-equitable formulations. Stellar contains various gender characters such as the asterisk, which can be seamlessly varied in size and position thanks to variable font technology. Inktraps and calligraphic endings give Stellar its character. As a text font, Stellar is also easy to read in small point sizes.
