

PROFILE

Born 1999,
USA. Based in London, UK.

Ash Pales is a designer and maker specializing in woodworking. She holds a BA in Architecture from Yale University (2020) and a MA from the Royal College of Art (2023), where her studies deepened her interest in the physical crafting of objects and spaces.

With professional experience across the US, UK, Europe, and Japan, Ash explores traditional and contemporary craft methods at multiple scales – from furniture and sculpture to architectural elements. Originally from the US, she now lives and works in London. While her work predominantly involves creating works from salvaged and locally sourced timber, she actively participates in a variety of interdisciplinary collaborations.

EDUCATION

2021-2023

Master of Architecture, Royal College of Art – London, UK

Coursework conceived of architecture as a materially engaged and context-driven practice. Focused on sustainable timber sourcing, site-based making, and the ecological narratives of wood.
