Design Futures is a 5-day convening to reimagine the role of the designer in addressing and dismantling systems of oppression in the built environment.

In this time, over 60 student leaders from across the nation representing 13 universities convene with faculty and leading practitioners in the field of community-based design and design justice to learn practical skills, advance the field, and build community.

Community-Based Design Convening

Tulane University
New Orleans, Louisiana
June 2nd-6th, 2025

The registration fee for an individual student is $1,400, which covers entry, dorm accommodations for the week and all food except dinners. Travel and other expenses are not covered*
