I made you angry

Your powdered covered fist keeps breaking in through my window

You left

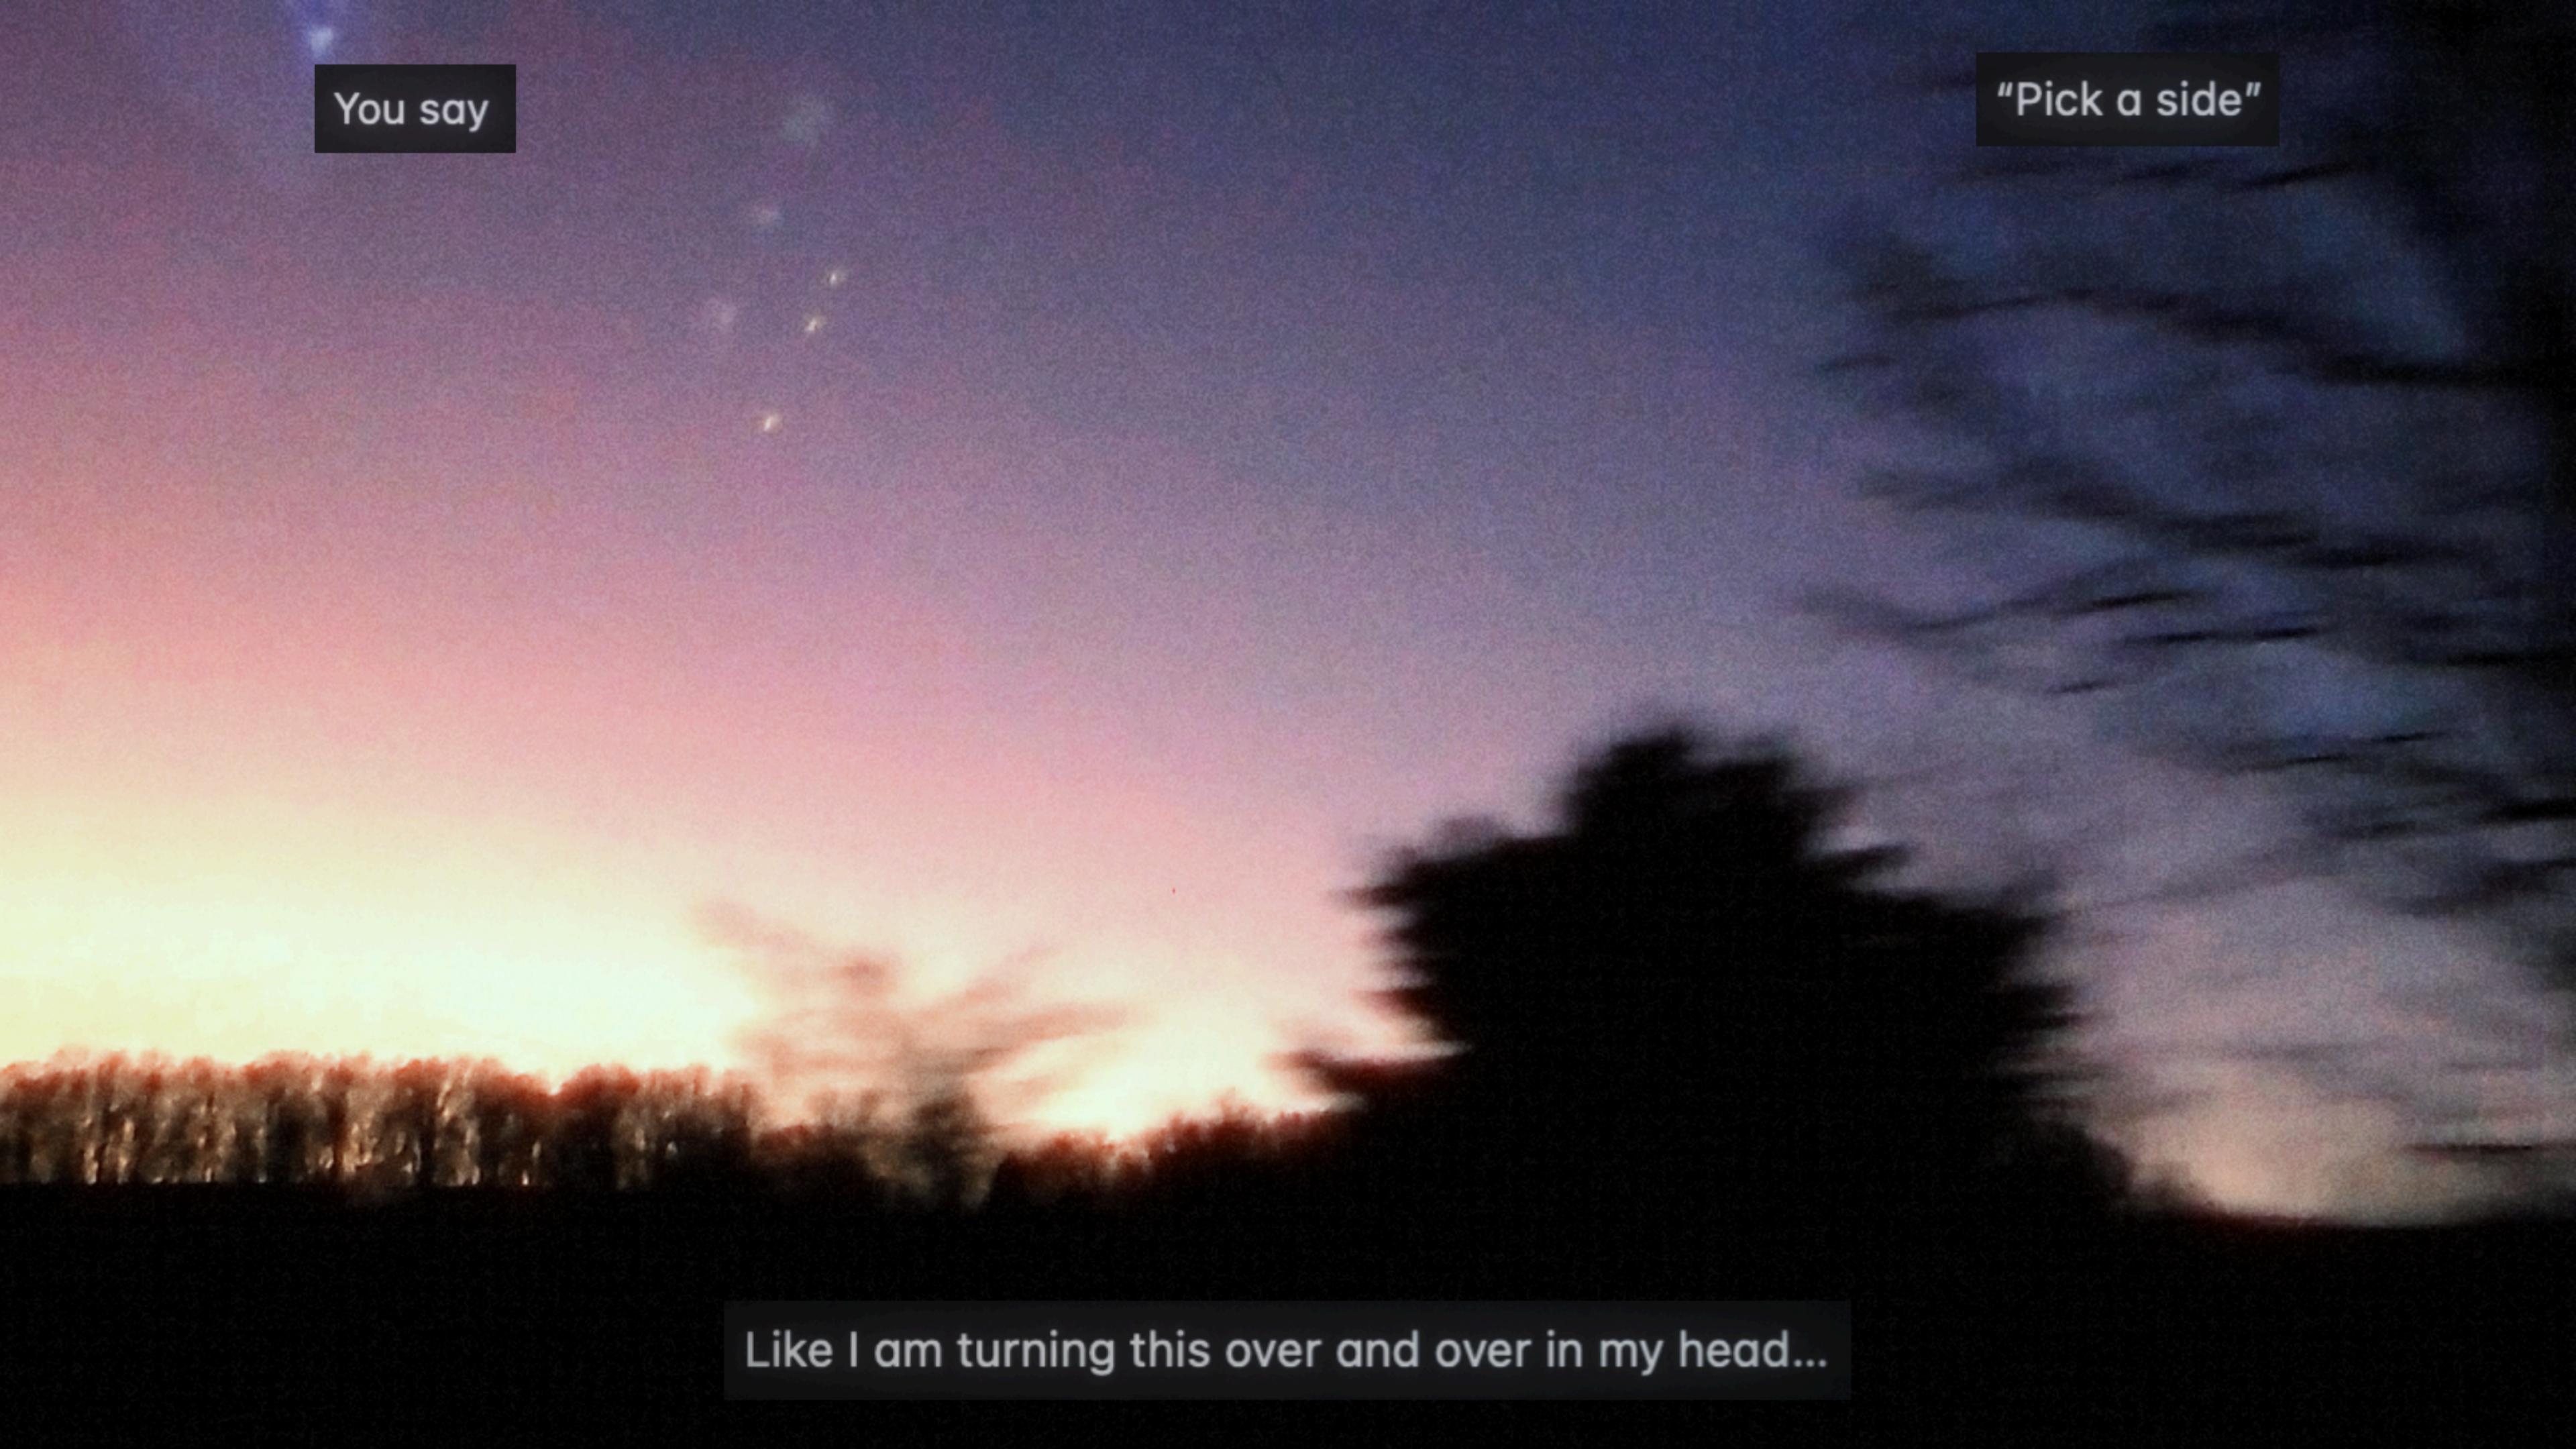

Righteously

Briefcase dragging you down the driveway into the water

Take flight right out the palm of my hand

You say

"Pick a side"

Like I am turning this over and over in my head...

You know where I land.

Corners|

you hide in

I saw you aim for the end

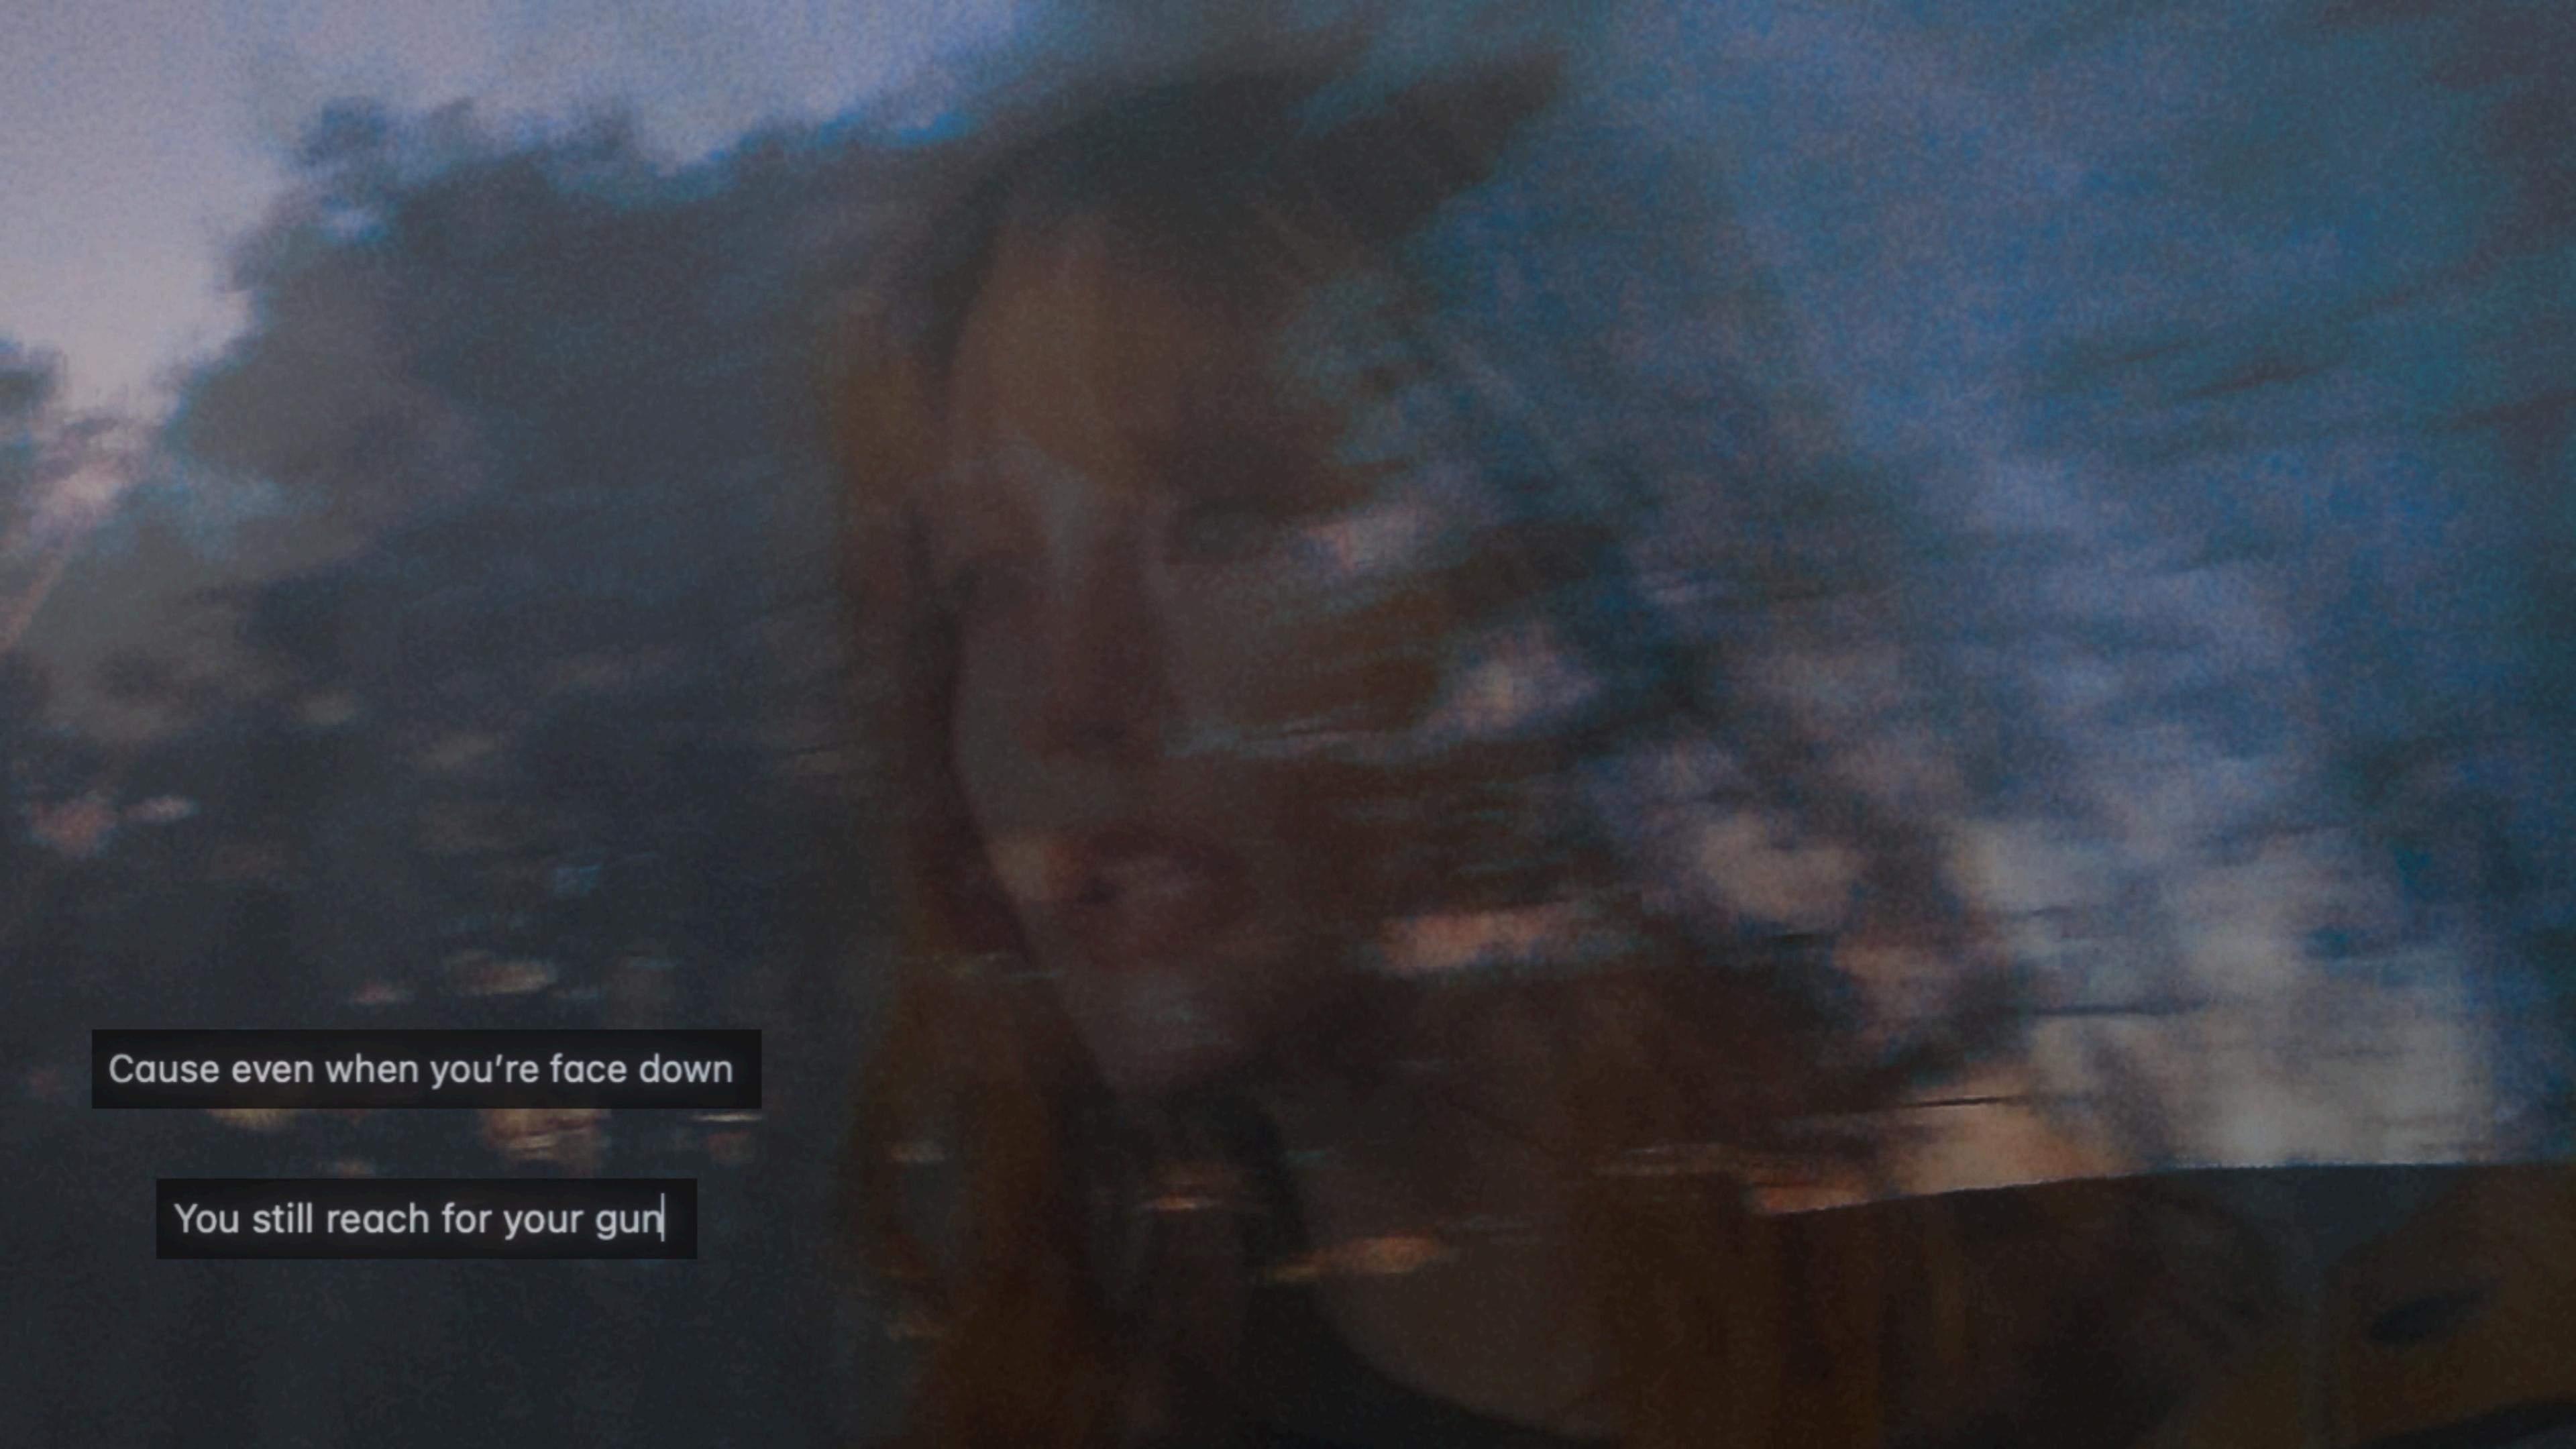

but I forgot in the morning|

Stranger, of my flesh

I thought I needed you then, but it was only a story

Cause even when you're face down

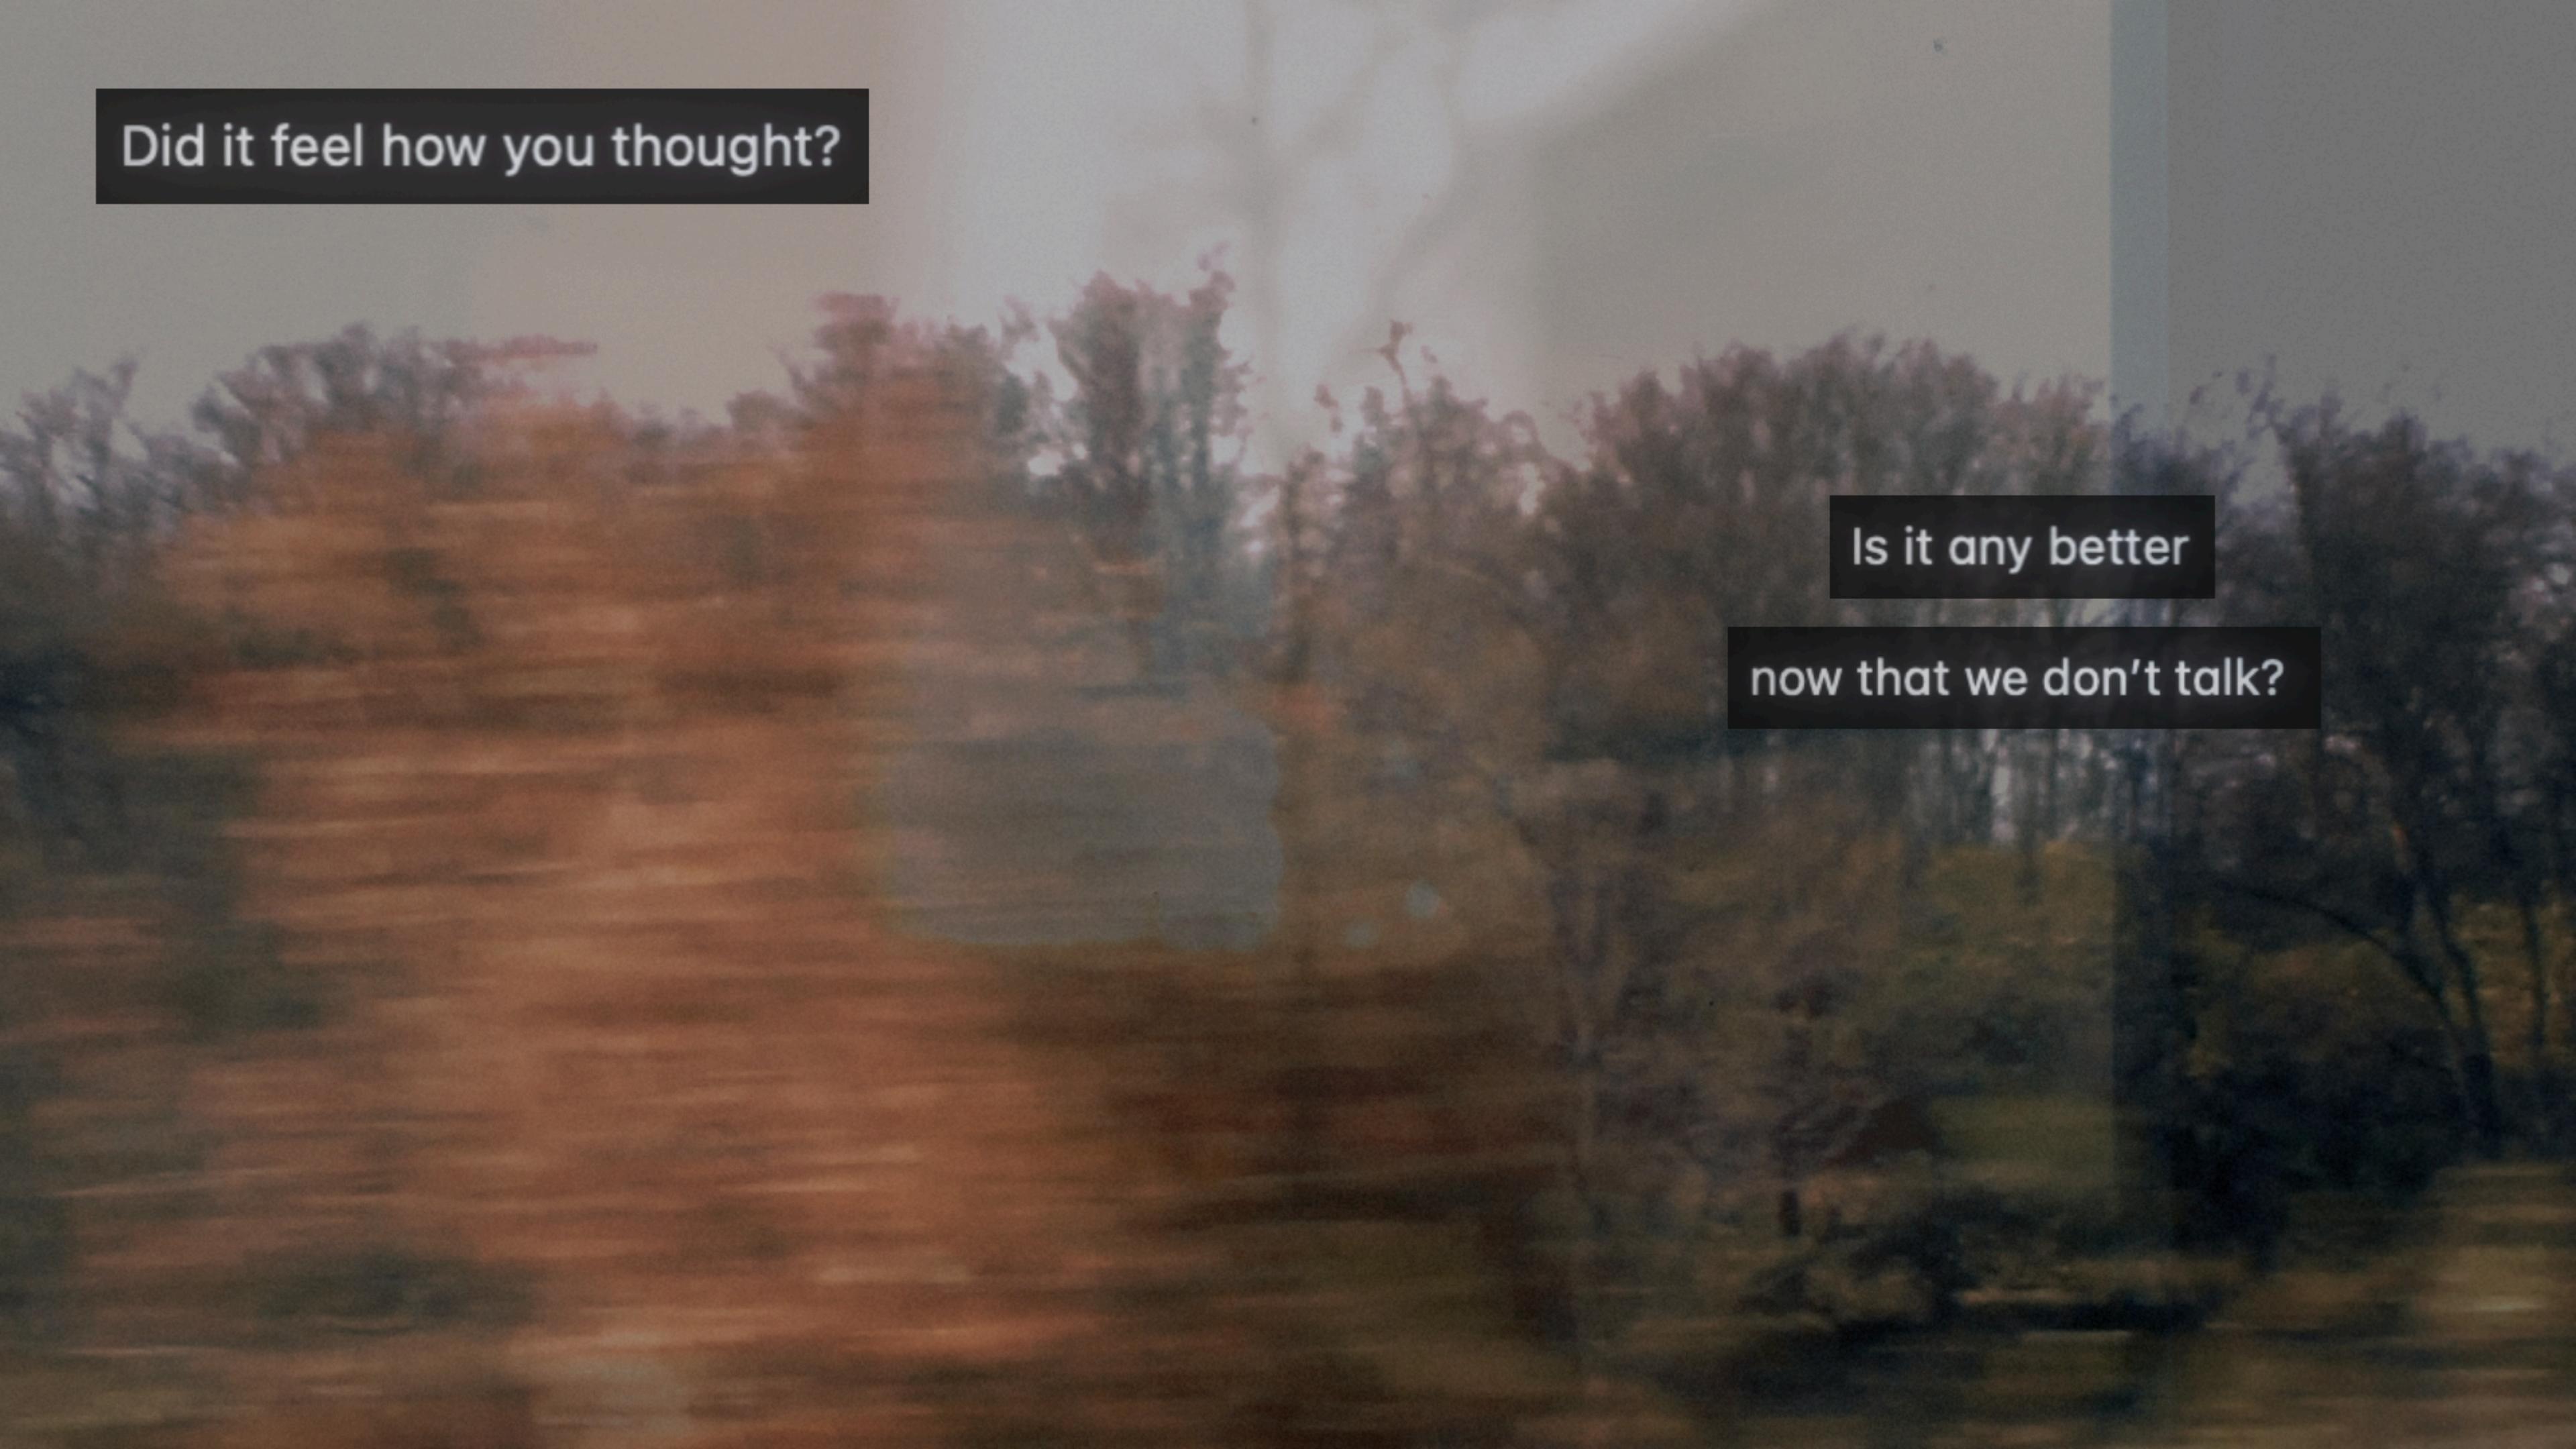

You still reach for your gun

Who you shooting at now?

When there's no one

no one...|

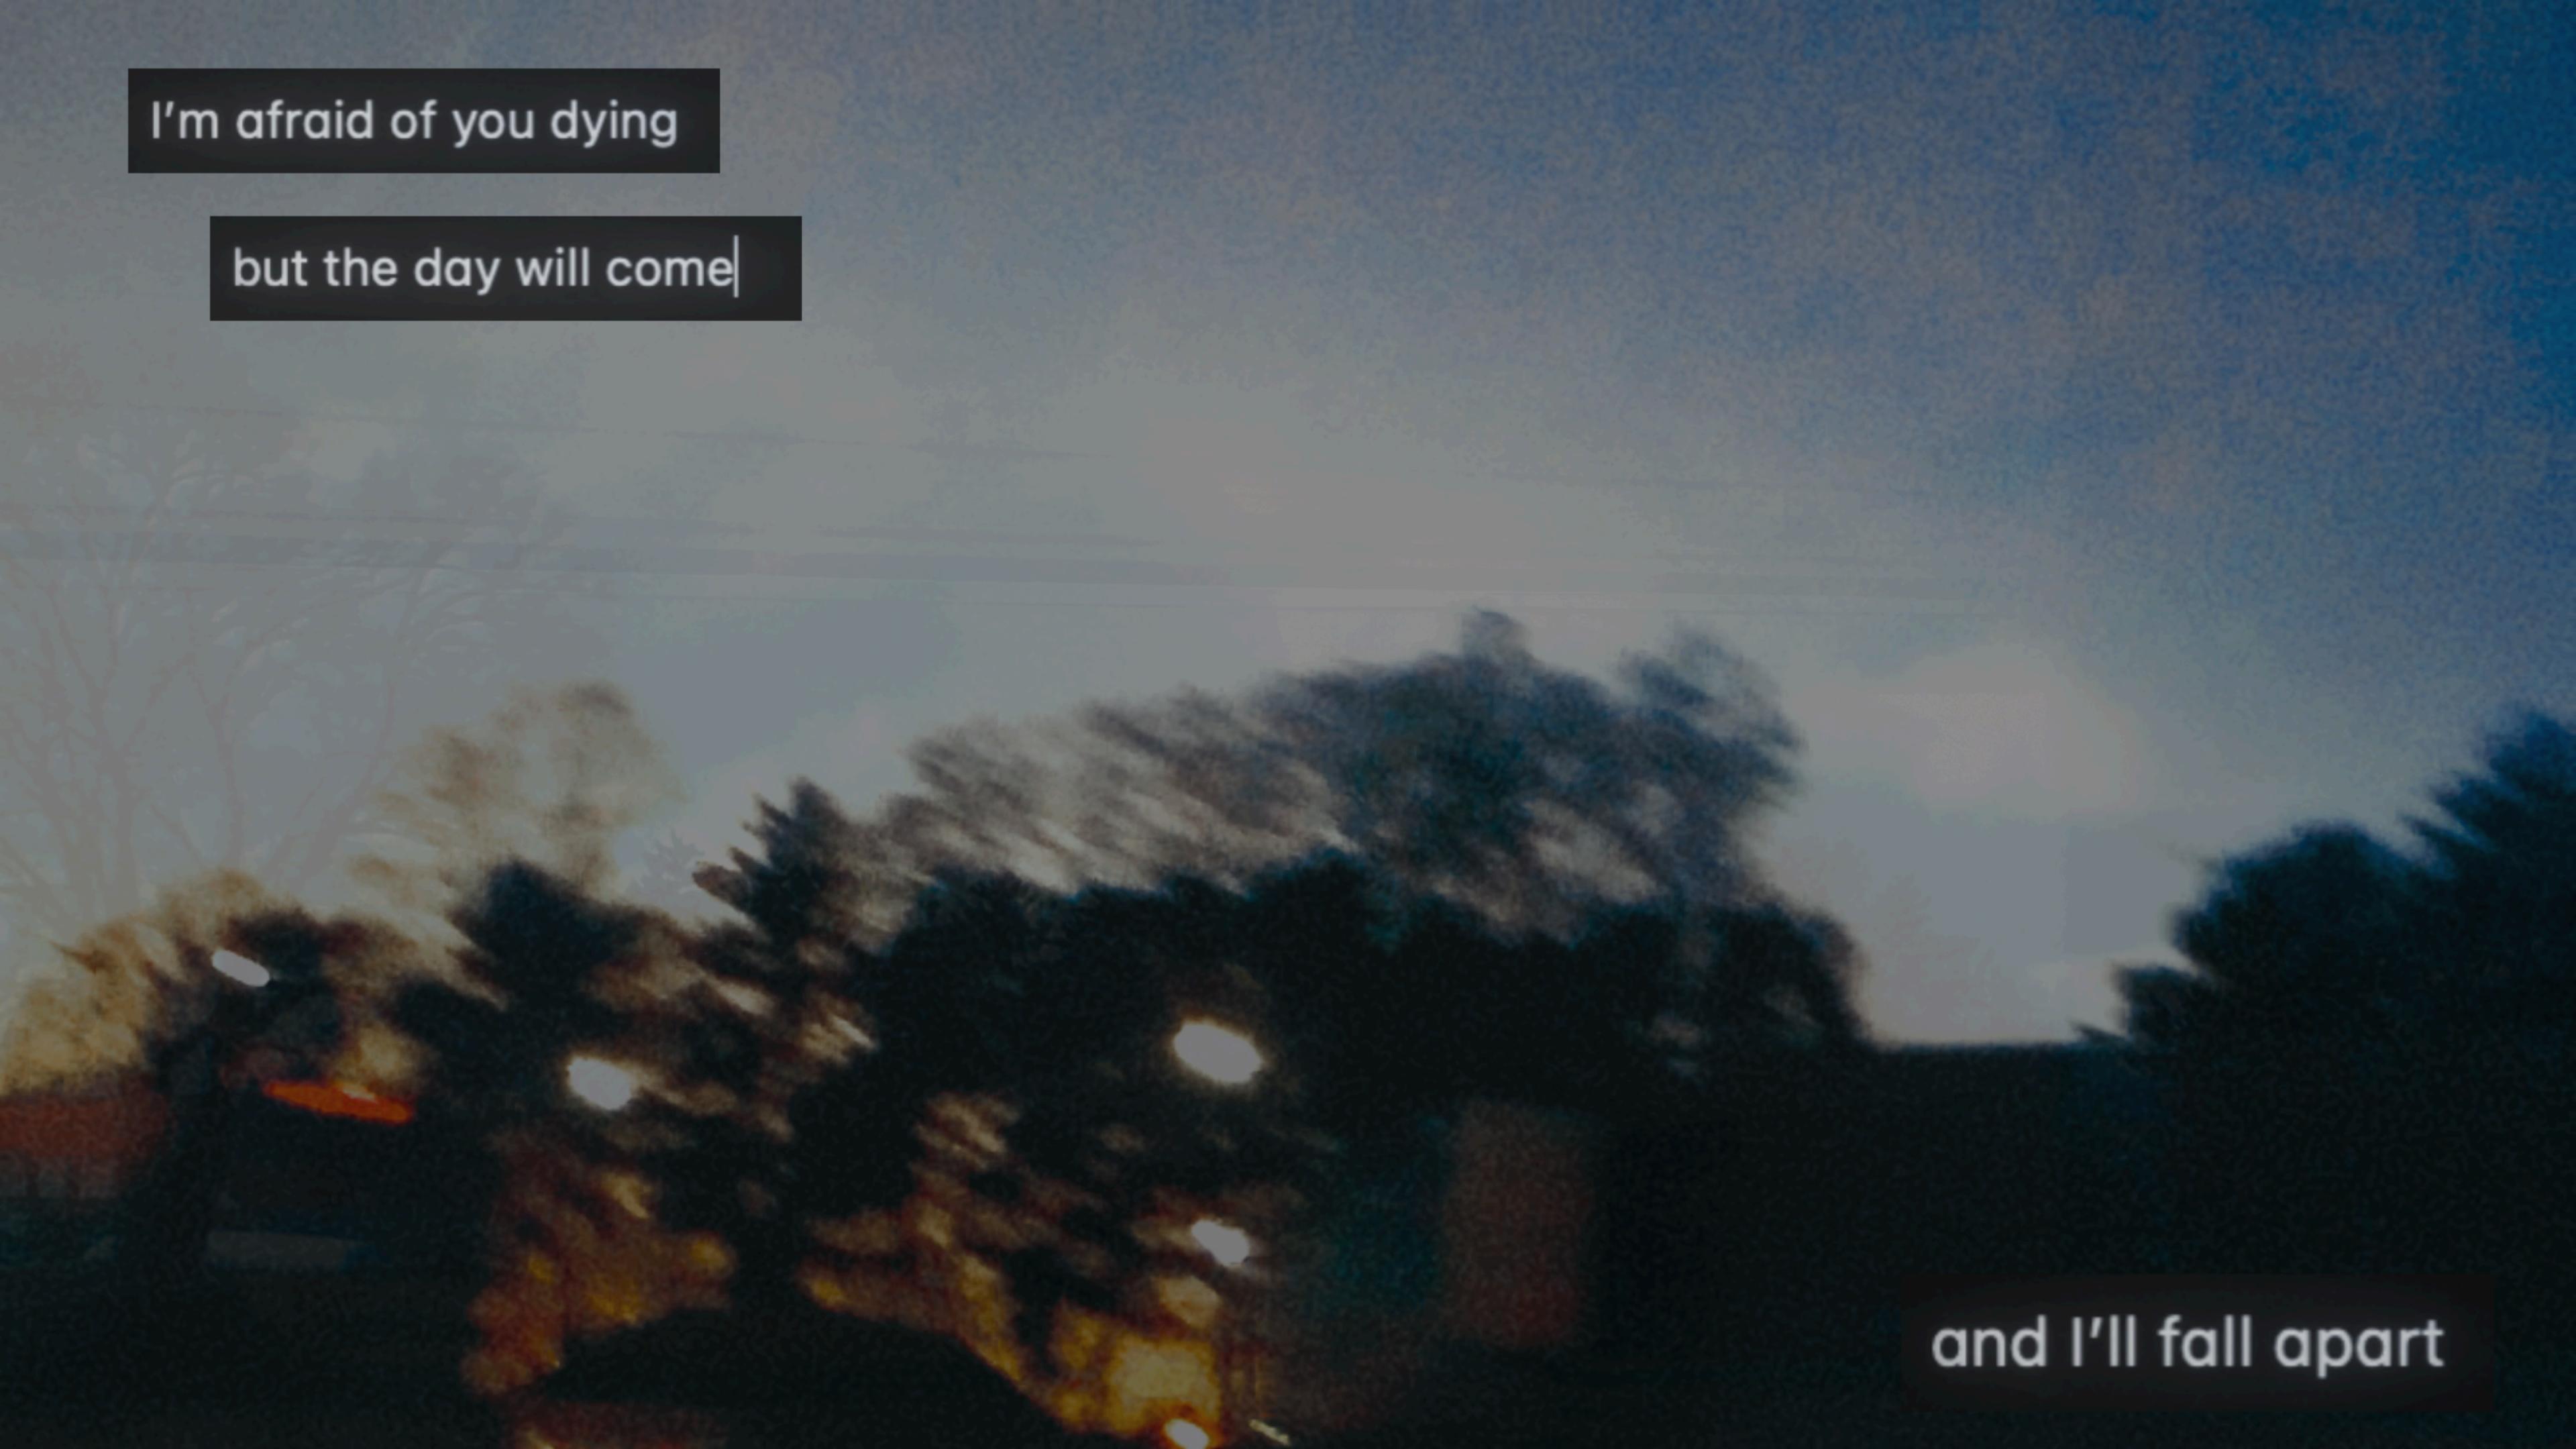

Did it feel how you thought?

Is it any better

now that we don't talk?

A dark, smoky landscape, possibly a forest fire or a volcanic eruption, with a small text box in the upper right.

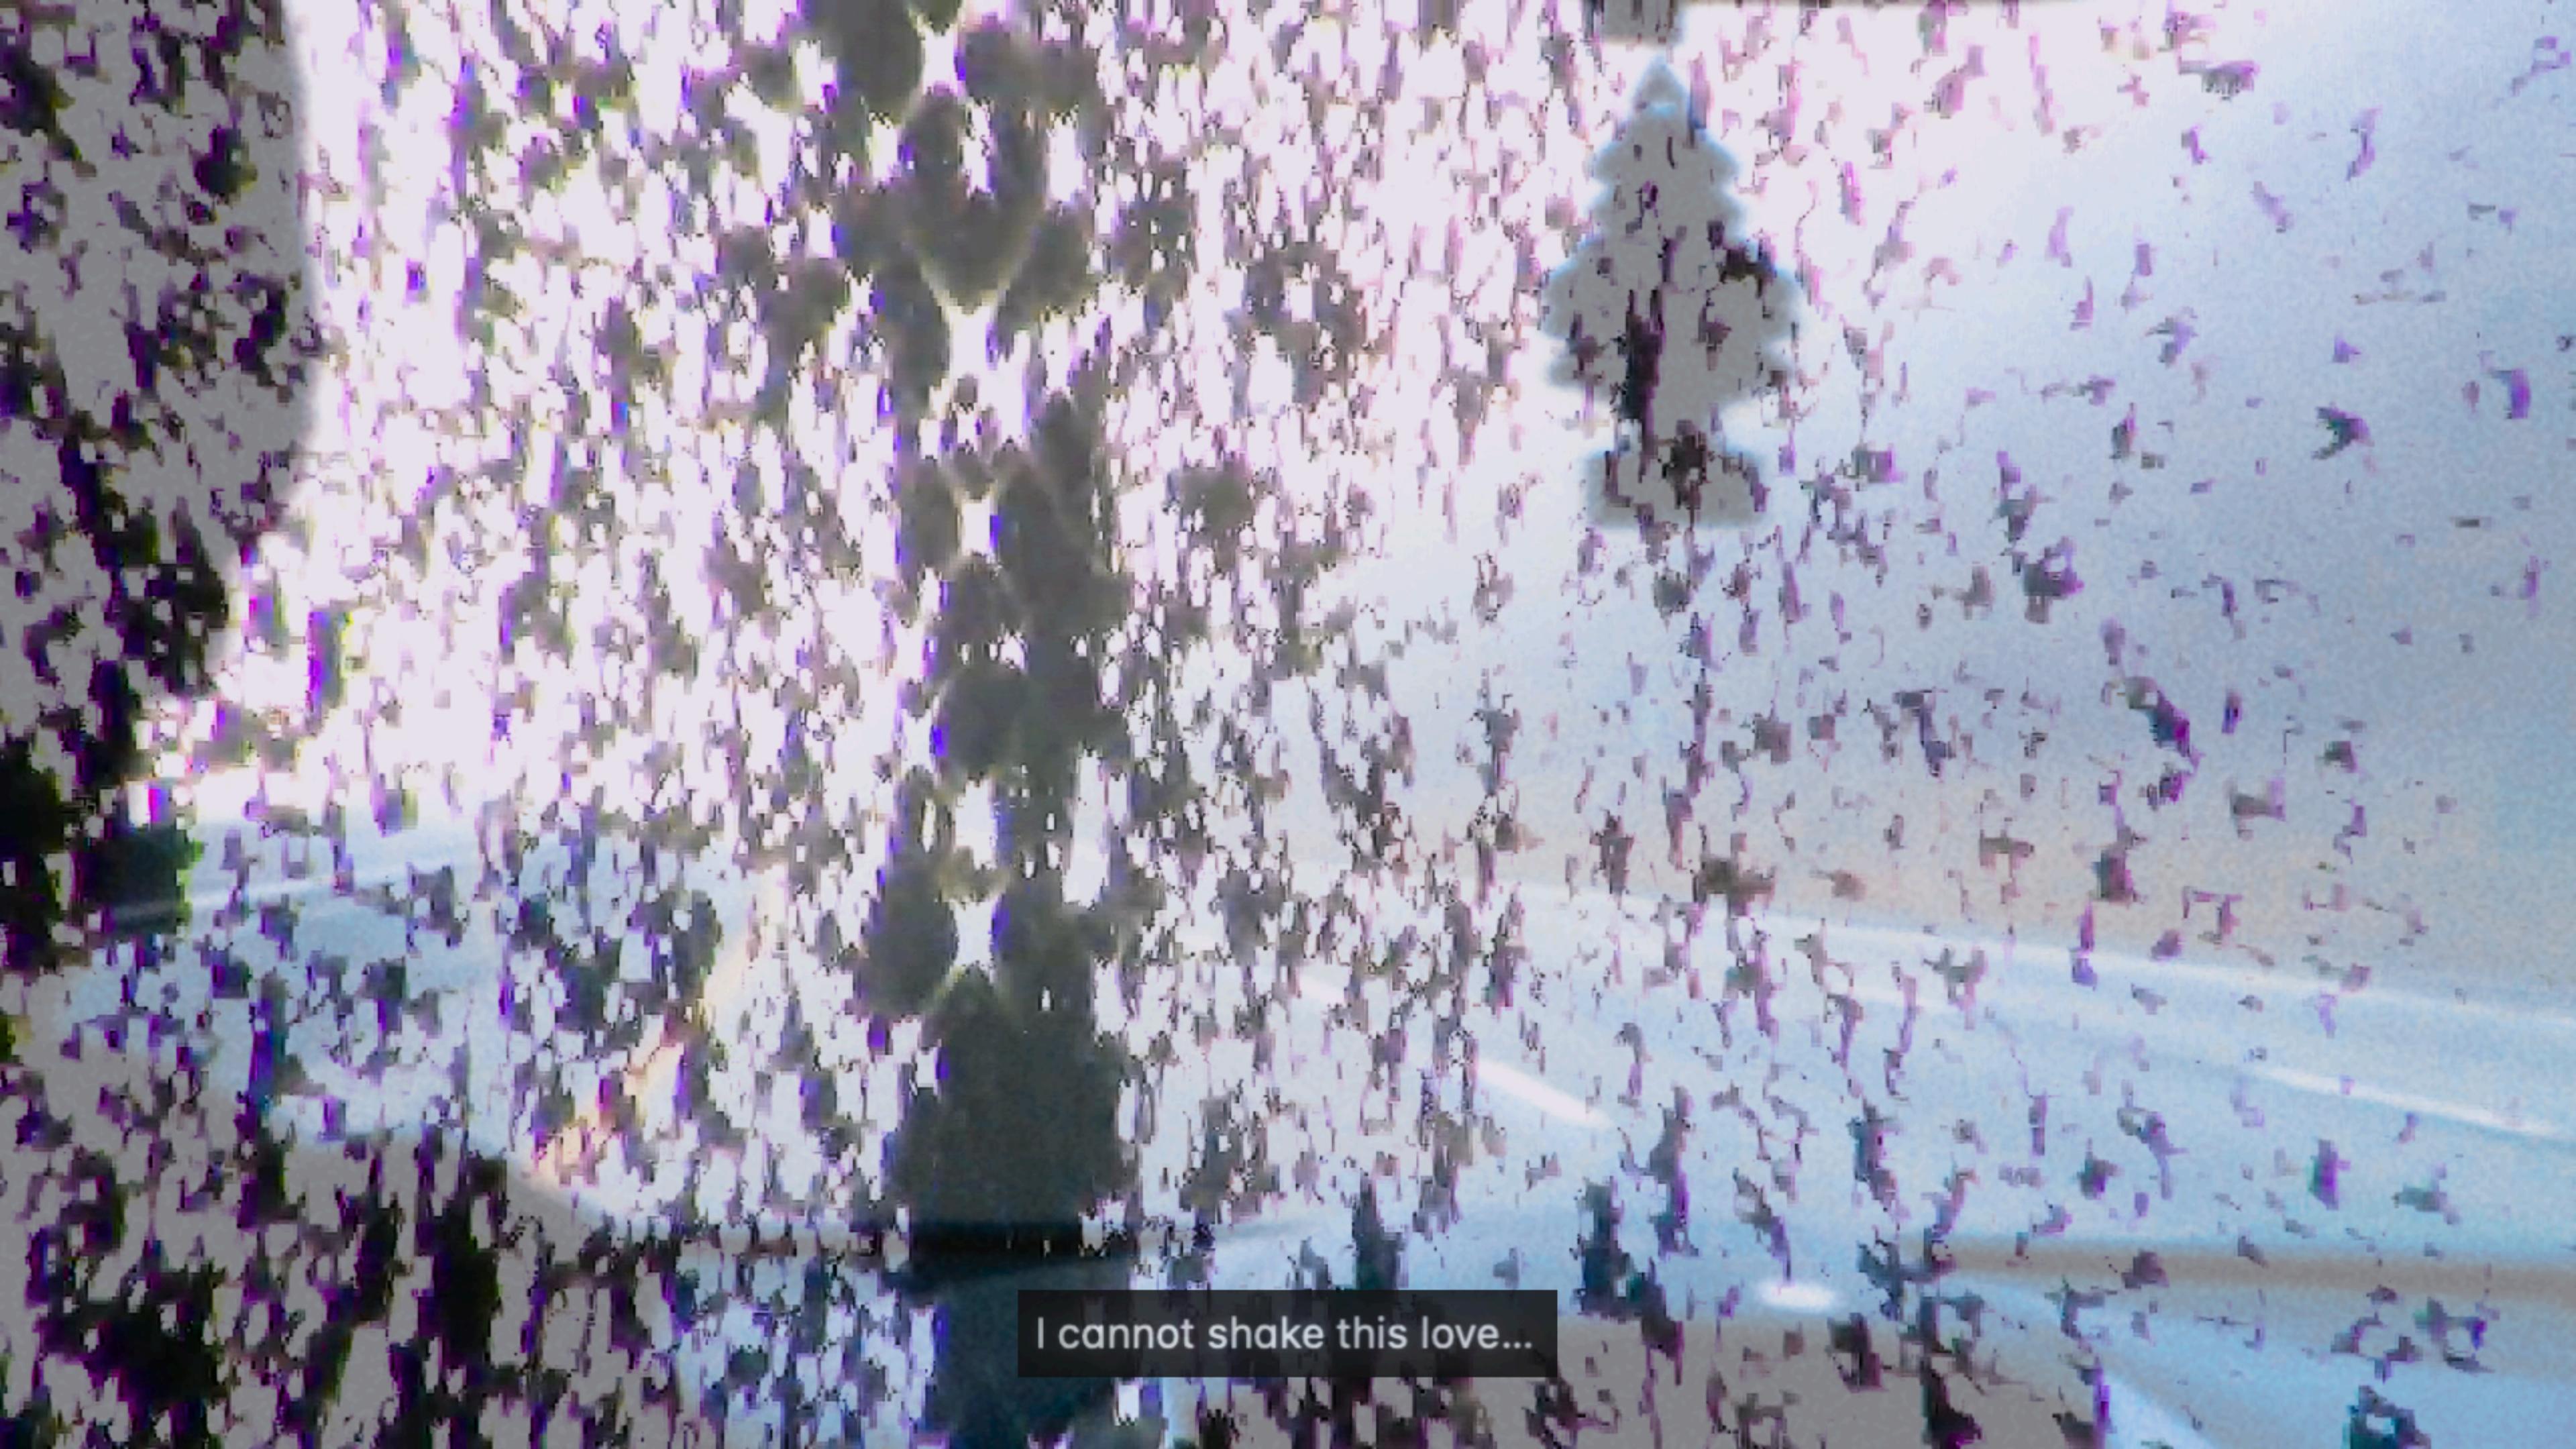

I don't know where we'd start.

I'm afraid of you dying

but the day will come|

and I'll fall apart

I cannot shake this love...

It was the best gift I've ever given myself. I actually like myself now.

I only regret that I didn't do it sooner Q!

I don't regret it at all, but the holidays suck. I miss (actual) loved ones who have passed, and resent the Happy Families media blitz.

Everything is ok! I have a wonderful network of people who support me and I'm at peace knowing that I made the best decision for my personal well being. Of course I wish I had a happy, healthy, "normal" family but I choose to focus on all the positive things I do have in my life and I'm putting effort into my chosen family.

Guilt Around Estrangement Isn't Talked About Enough

Feeling guilty around cutting off parents and/or family isn't talked about enough. People talk about cutting them off, but not enough about how guilt can creep up on you and make you question your decision. I had a crying meltdown today because I cut off my father and his entire family after being repeatedly mistreated and abused, despite knowing I made the right decision. It's so hard not to feel guilty and at fault. Can anyone relate?

You are grieving the loss of possibility. Death means reconciliation will never happen. What you are feeling is perfectly normal. So is second guessing yourself.
