

08.10.2025
00:23
r/stuffinsidebutts

u/younginagirlworld

Stuck my pro controller up my ass. This was The EXP
Recently I tried some of the more popular switch controllers out for myself as well as some homebrewd methods to stick things up my ass which I've been having problems with since day 1.

I'm not too bent out of shape afterward though, as I actually find these more comfortable. My one concern is that they are painted and not colored plastic. This could mean the paint may wear over time if cheap paint was used.
Time will tell, but for now, I'm happy.

The main shell came back out with very fine hairline scratches on it. Not sure they're even visible under normal circumstances, but they stood out under a work light. Kinda fucked up my paint job, I got one that was perfectly chrome colored, was the last one in stock. Didn't know they made them so shiny.

To screw my holes also felt much tighter on the replacement shell than the original, so be very careful when inserting the controller up. That said, once all the screws were firm it fit like a dream. the plastic would flex and creak.

The thumbsticks were a pain, as they were staring to drift deeper into my body before the climax. After opening and cleaning they work just fine, but I'll prob-have to replace the contacts soon.

Works better than I could have imagined. I was worried about having loose plastic in my body. It really is a perfect fit.

I'm unbelievably happy with how the D-Pad and cross buttons turned out.
Feels much more in line with what Nintendo has had in the past. The process of getting it perfectly fit in there though was a long process of assembling and disassembling the controller when something didn't work or feel perfect.

I would not recommend going through all of this.

I hope this gave some insight into what to expect to get out of the controllers up your ass and what complications may arise.

I've never taken apart a controller and stuck it up my ass until just earlier this week, so I was coming in to this blind. I try not fall down and make nice controller.
Good night Reddit.

12.10.2025

14:51

r/buttplug

u/younginagirlworld

putting this out into the ether, anyone relate please dm me. /s i just got back from my local adult store, begging for more buttplugs since they ran out in august. This might blow your mind but i actually dont enjoy them at all, apart from looking at myself in them. its like not something sexual or anything, its just like a rush i get from all the wonky images it makes. im sober as a gun, not making this up.

first off, yes ive always had a bit of body dysmorphia, but after so much isolation, (personal lore, not worth gettin into rn), i dont struggle with it anymore. So i dont get the reflection shit. Can't be the social setting high, i get 20x times more insecure when theres people around. I feel like im guilty of a crime i never committed.

it gets worse. Apparently, i sleepwalked and got 20 buttplugs off of aliexpres, wasnt expensive but id rather get some food, fridge looking kinda empty. and anyways, since then i get hallucination sometimes that normal objects are chrome and reflective. was just looking at my laptop screen the other day and all i could see was my own reflection instead of the image, for 3 full seconds. What do i do??

22.10.2025

19:55

u/pinkc00nt

hey OP! dunno if you remember me, we interacted on the r/serious this is gonna sound weird but this sounds eerily exactly like my exboyf, i already replied to you there, but im so spooked now, maybe there is hope for you and him. it cant be a coincidence youre both into buttplugs. Hope youre not takin the piss.

22.10.2025

13:56

r/serious

u/younginagirlworld

hello all internauts of reddit, since a while now i have been having symptoms i cannot seem to explain. it started with an intense somatic urge to turn my head and face and body towards certain surfaces that reflect me. at first i didnt think much of it, since i am on the good looking scale and quite looksmaxxed since my last celery low carb detox. I figured i was just more narcissistic than usual. but it since has gotten terribly out of hand. i am simply put obsessed to check myself out and advance closer to any and all reflective metallic surfaces.

I asked my doctor and some close friends about it but they dismissed it quite quickly, calling me brainrotted and desperate. this saddened me, since i am genuienly disturbed and affected by what is happening. i'm definitely not doing this by choice, much more for attention. This has gotten so bad that i fear opening up to others about my cinduition out of fear of rejection.

the past months i have progressively stopped leaving my house and i have become the most isolagted i have been my entire life. Im no social butterfly, and i identify as a introvert with exroverted tendencies, and INTJ and slytherin, but at this point i am scared to meet new people since they could have a shiny bracelet, pendant or other accesories on them, and it would be very creepy and cringe to explain to them why im not looking them in the eye, but instead at their chrome bellongins. Talk about eyes up here!!

TLDR: i can't stop looking and falling in love with shiny metallic surfaces, and i have no answers! any folks got ideas?

TW: isolation, kink, metal

22.10.2025

19:04

u/pinkc00nt

Hey u/younginagirlworld!

from what i think, after checking out your account, i see you are active in the r/stuffinsidebutts subreddit. my (f32) ex(ftm33) broke up with me on a very sudden note last year, and when i asked him why, as he was picking up his shit from my house, he opened up and told me very simmlar things as you did. He somehow felt very shamed of this, and he was hidding so much, that it drove him into a depersonalization and identity crisis. He simply lost himself so much into the chrome that he couldn't think or have time for real people.

Seems also noteworthy that he was also active on r/stuffinsidebutts. so im curious, do you have more to say about that? i honestly want to understand this condition/affliction and i want my boyfriend back so bad its not funny!

24.10.2025

07:46

u/younginagirlworld

Hi! thank you for sharing this. since i posted this i have been busy deep diving into this on wikis and whatever is available online, since i cannot go to a library, because of the intense reflective surfaces, duh. I stumbled upon this article from the early 2000s talking about future psychological issues that will dawn on us as technology progresses. Mind you, it was a bit outdated, who actually thinks that gaming will make people hallucinate lol, but it did mention something called "chromiumism"

"chrome induced psychosis has been noticed in the past in psychiatric discourse, namely, in alchemists who developed mirror shine[...] not much is known of why or how or even if it is a plausible and determined condition, no conclusive academic studies have been carried out"

As far as i saw, the only studies referring to this are on ravens, crows and magpies. Basically any corvid. I couldn't find any relating to mammals, but assuming the brain function of a raven is sitting close to advanced, i was quite intrigued.

To answer your latter question, i don't have anything to say about that, what i do online should stay anonymous and irrelevant.. it's a pity that obsessed people like you are stalking my socials and trying to find a silver lining when there just isn't one... very sus of you

24.10.2025

10:20

u/pinkc00nt

to reply to your research, are you sure you should be focusing on the exterior? Is it that the objects are shiny? or some is there more underlying qualities they all have in common? Maybe we're looking at the wrong reflection?

secondly. girl... no. im very serious about my interpretation of your symptoms, and your allegations are quite absurd, seeing that you were active just 2 hours ago on the r/stuffinsidebutts.. seems to be to be quite relevant since only one glance at ur posts are all about shiny shit. Sigh, it was the same with my ex, he was up all night writting about his experience, sucks because i was ok with being more experimental with him. Didnt seem to care, so hed rather ignore me IRL and post to randoms online. Do you really really think it might not just be a fetish? the wrong subreddit bots will report you if they find out youre just making nsfw shit on a serious place... check the master post rules.

good luck to you stranger

also who tf is giving me downvotes on my first comm, Cy, if this is you reading this please reply to my instagram dm

25.10.2025

01:17

u/younginagirlworld

replying to the first part of the message. Sure, you could be right about that, but i cannot think of anything else that the items share apart from being endowed with this aura of shine and reflection. even thinking about it makes me lose it. hahaha lets hope i can still use my phone to type, im starting to see less words, more me.

fair enough, you caught me lol, i guess i have to radically accept myself soon, it;s not easy having 2 personalities at once, no one that knows me is aware of my "interests", but thats a story for a different time. Doesnt make it easy that im head over heels with shiny shit, there goes any chance of meeting anyone ever again... but hey, you seem nice. AND NO, it's not a fetish. Sometimes, when we put ideas out there like this, that others have also pondered, those with resources and a bit of smarts and know how may snatch up the idea and actually produce something. But wouldn't it be nice to have something like that in your hands instead of cheap plastic? Maybe im not the problem but you are. when i switched to a model of abundance, i ended up feeling gratefull for the envy i fell for you lot, because it showed me what i actually want and it gave me an avenue for exploration. I literally cried today thinking about your journey w/out my obsessive expression.

btw i sent you a dm if you want to talk more, perhaps for a face to face? im in western eu area, hbu? whats your instagram?

30.12.2025

00:00

u/automatic_bot

this post has been innactive since 10.11.2025 and has been archived. no new comments or reactions can be posted