

Synopsis

Maggie Prescott (Ella Purnell), a top hitwoman, and Dick Avery (Joseph Gordon Levitt), an assassin handler, need a new face in order to complete their biggest assignment yet. Jo (Lupita Nyong'o) is a substitute teacher in Buhl, Idaho who is a huge fan of Émilie Flostre (Rosamund Pike), a well-known author of a book that is soon-to-be banned by the state of Idaho. One day, Dick Avery is picking up his kid from school, in the classroom supervised by Jo. He is astounded by her potential as she appears utterly unremarkable, the perfect person to slip in and out to complete a job unnoticed. Dick notices that Jo is a superfan of Émilie Flostre and entices her to join him for dinner by stating that her favorite author will be there. At dinner, Maggie, Dick, and Émilie manage to strike a deal with Jo, after plenty of negotiation, to become a hitwoman.

To learn the ropes of assassination and to prepare for her assignment, Jo must shadow Maggie during her hits. Throughout this, Jo meets Paul Duvaul (David Bowie), the head of disguise. Many makeover montages ensue as Jo follows Maggie's hits.

Finally, after much preparation as well as shadowing many hits, Jo is ready for her assignment to kill the governor. However, Dick is having second thoughts about hiring someone who has never killed before. They travel to New Orleans, Louisiana, to go to a governor's ball at the 1984 World's Fair. After a big fight between Dick and Jo, they agree that she is ready and that the killing must be done. Through her newfound confidence in herself, Jo successfully completes her assignment, leading a new life as a great hitwoman working alongside Maggie and Dick. Meanwhile, Émilie Flostre successfully prevents her book from being banned and to celebrate, she attends the governor's funeral.
