

When you first walk into the building you have to climb four flights of stairs. Each flight feels like two flights. At the top you find a door to be opened to the left. To the right of it lay an arrangement of junk from various apartments. Once the door opens and you walk through, turn right then left, and you will see angel wings on the floor. Then open the door of apartment 403. First you will see the acab painting, second you will see the red light coming from the bathroom. If not now, later you will open the bathroom door and see a painting floating in the tub. If you decide not to check the red light before walking into the space; you will find people chilling on the couch in the kitchen.... Then the art show will show itself. Either the orgone box or the door will be the first in your peripheral vision. Tucked away you might find detail oriented works by Jeff Egner and Emila Howe. An arrangement of paintings, video, sculpture and furniture will float into perspective.
