

A symbol of royalty and a source of poison, the asp—a snake found in the Nile region-is an animal full of intrigue. The sinuous creature served as the inspiration for a new high jewelry parure from Cartier, called Sand Aspis. The necklace is composed of triangular motifs that reference serpentine scales. A triangular rose-cut diamond weighing 3.63 carats alludes to the viper's head, while the rest of the necklace comprises yellow and white diamonds set in rose gold with petrified-wood inlays, conjuring the moiré reflections of snakeskin. For details see Sources, page 134. -Jenny Hartman

PHOTOGRAPHY BY F. MARTIN RAMIN PROP STYLING BY TANYA MOSKOWITZ

50 WSJ. MAGAZINE