I took part in a four-week expedition to Borneo raising £3000 of the £4000 trip via fundraising initiatives. Whilst there I took part in numerous activities that aided many of those who are less fortunate than myself and gained the valuable experience of working in a team in a high-stress environment. I also took on the role of team leader – coordinating the group to complete the set tasks.

Interests:

I spend most of my free time cooking, reading cookbooks, and exploring food history and science. I love cooking for friends and family, which inspired my “Word of Mouth” project focused on communal cooking and recipe sharing. At the age of ten I helped my Dad build a pizza oven in the back garden and have been making pizzas ever since. My favourite thing to do when I have a free evening is light the pizza oven and sit in the garden with a beer whilst I watch the fire then make a pizza.
