THE ACT OF BUILDING (2023)
collaboration with EPFL

One of EPFL's laboratories dedicated to architecture, ALICE, owes its name to the character created by Lewis Carroll. In fact, the author wrote several texts on the subject, and Alice in Wonderland is full of references to this art form. Playing cards become the units for building castles of cards with a fragile balance. The studio compositions are inspired by Norman C. Black's surrealist paintings, in which reality is twisted and dreamily re-imagined. Other photographs are inspired by Erwin Wurm's One Minute Sculptures, in which temporality and human interaction play a central role.

SURVIE DE BOHÈME (2023-ongoing)

In the event of survival, what should one take ? Survie de bohème revisits the classic « survival kit » by including unexpected, often absurd objects. The compositions play with the line between tool and gadget, focusing on plastic. The parodic tone is inspired by Jacques Carelman's Catalogue d'objets introuvables (1969).
