Guides:

The "branches" of Canopy -- an important are core primitive and organizing format.

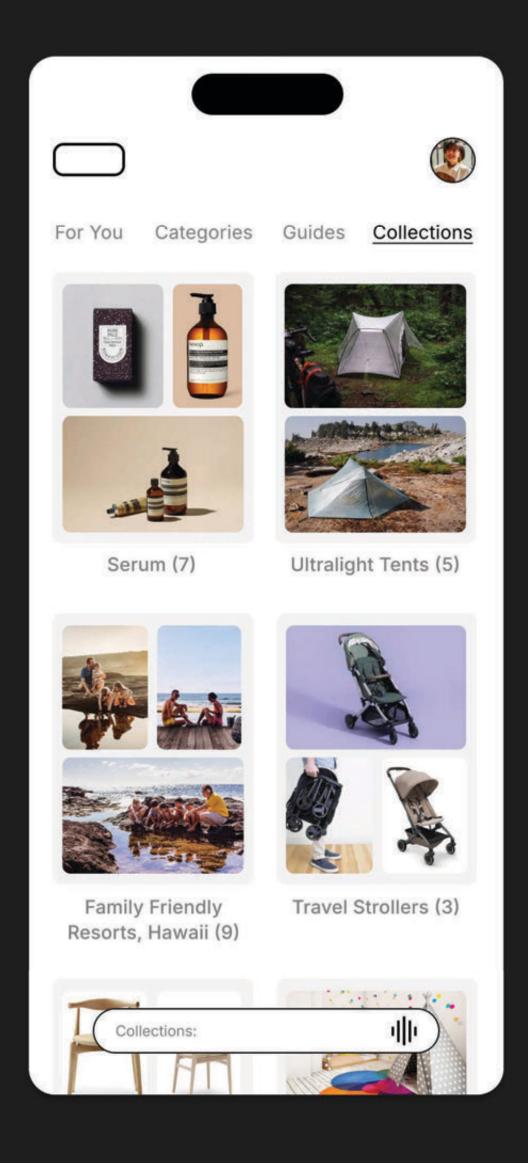

- Guides can be auto-created by Canopy by synthesizing dozens of articles, forums and web data. Example: "Best travel cameras." A user can query the guide directly and ask about things, like "which one of these is the cheapest and has the best image quality?"
- Users can create guides themselves either through A) prompting AI directly "what are the best Korean skin care brands for men?" -- OR -- curate their own from scratch (adding data to the system).

The latter is related to users telling AI what they like and don't like about products they have, allowing us to create a proprietary dataset.

Collections

If you've saved things on Canopy, this is where you'll find them. We can use AI to auto-sort, help you retrieve something you saved, and create your "library."

Product Details Page:

We create the canonical product details page for products, places, and experiences on the internet. This is like an always - updating and hyper personalized Wikipedia. We can tall you if:

- a product has appeared in top lists
- · what the internet thinks of it, and other sub-groups like "celebrities love x"
- New versions of the same product
- recalls, and other salient info
- links to guides the product appears in
- Endless scroll "down the rabbit hole" will surface other products from the same brand and then automatically pivot you into related products.

Al Visual Curation:

Generate visual feeds based on triangulating from things you like. This is a visual way to tell the AI "something with design like x and materials like x."

Long press on an image to drag into chat as a reference. Find similarities between two products, or ask Canopy to compare and contrast them for you to help you make informed decisions.
